306: Black History – Continuing the Story™

Black Americans' influence can be found at the core of American life, from science and academia, to music, arts and social movements. When you explore the journey of Black history, you find stories of strength, resilience, and achievement. In every community, these stories are foundational to building shared values, which inspire today's youth to become tomorrow's leaders.

306: Black History – Continuing the Story is a free digital course that helps students understand the history of events that have shaped the experience of many Black people in the United States. It emphasizes the accomplishments of Black leaders in business and medical fields, highlights trailblazing Black professionals, and explores events and philosophies that have confronted injustices. Through interactive lessons, students draw connections from past and present events to recognize and empathize with the ongoing challenges Black people continue to face in the United States. The course's brand-new lesson ("Nonviolence for Social Change") was developed with Dr. Bernice A. King and scholars and experts from The King Center's education department. The new lesson empowers students to explore nonviolence as a transformative tool for addressing social challenges and fostering positive change in their communities.
